RE: Thieving Scum (again)

After several months of relative calm, once again CD's are disappearing from the control room. Inasmuch as several seem to be missing all of a sudden, I can only conclude that this is not an isolated incident, and that we once again have a fucking thief in our midst.

Therefore, unless all missing items are returned immediately -- (especially the next-to-impossible-to-find Technotrax Vol. 2 double CD, #87-#88 in the library) the following policy will go into effect Monday morning:

Except during business hours (M-F 9 AM to 5 PM), only paid employees of MARS-FM will be permitted to be in the building. Absolutely no interns or guests allowed at any other time, without express advance permission from me. During business hours, no one will be permitted to enter the control room except for the jock on duty and paid employees of the radio station on official business, i.e., NO INTERNS allowed!

Yes, jocks, this means that unless the thieving piece of shit (you know who you are) who's been stealing our CD's returns them, you will not have the luxury of interns pulling your music, filing records, answering phones, helping with contests, etc.

This may not be fair to everybody, but this is the only way I can think of to positively protect station property -- and the station's musical integrity -- against thieves who seem to be of the opinion that they need our CD's more than our listeners do. Obviously I hope it doesn't come down to this -- (I'll be inconvenienced just as much as anyone else) -- but I have absolutely no intention of fucking around by playing little games with thieves.

(Needless to say, if I do catch you, Thief, I will call the police and press charges. I've done it before, and I won't hesitate to do it again if the situation warrants it.)
